

HUAK

This must be some kind of procession in the City Park. I don't remember when the photo was taken. I don't remember any such things [that we would have been obliged to go on processions]. Because if I had not wanted to, i would not have gone - i did everything of my own accord. This is a very faulty attitude. People just say that it was a bad regime that forced people to do things. But compared to what we had been through before [the war], it was a straightforward affair, this socialism.
